Appendix A

Definitions

1. Bribe

A bribe is an incentive, payment, reward or benefit offered, promised or provided to any person to influence that person's actions or decisions to obtain a business, commercial, contractual, regulatory or personal advantage.

A bribe can be anything of value, including cash, gifts, inside information, favors, hospitality or entertainment, offering to hire relatives, remuneration or reimbursement, charitable donation or social contributions etc. Bribes do not necessarily have to be a large value.

Some (non-exhaustive) examples of bribes are as follows:

- Lavish gifts, meals, entertainment or travelling expenses, especially when these goods are disproportionate, frequent or appear to be in the context of on-going business negotiation
- The use of services, facilities or assets owned by Crop Integration Business without any compensation
- Cash payments
- Payment of kickbacks or of a similar form
- Provision of benefits to relatives of customers or prospective customers, civil servants and state officials, for example, providing tuition fees, healthcare or medical treatment
- Subcontract to people connected to individuals who are involved in the main contract
- Participation in a local company owned by relatives of a customer or prospective customer, civil servant or state official

2. Bribery

Bribery is a promise to accept or offer money or other benefits, both directly and indirectly, resulting in improper action (includes breach of trust, acting dishonestly, or acting in an unfair and biased way.)

The benefit in question can be an offer, a receipt, or an inappropriate action either direct or indirect (such as conducting business through an intermediary, or supplier of goods and services). Inappropriate actions can be related to business-related activities of Crop Integration Business (for example, action of a director or an employee or third-party on behalf of Crop Integration Business) or involving a government agency or department. Bribery is a crime under the jurisdiction of the court and the law. Crop Integration Business also prohibits bribery in all its forms.

3. Corruption

Corruption is a broad term that covers a wide variety of misconduct for persons performing on duty, persons with authority or persons assigned with important responsibilities through illegal channels or means according to ethical standards, such as theft, fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation etc.

Corruption also covers the misuse of authority (whether it be that authority is acquired through tradition, education, election, marriage, appointment or any other method) for personal gain.

Corruption practices and misuse of authority can not only be perpetuated by civil servants or state officials, but also in the private sector as well, all for personal benefit.

4. Fraud

Fraud refers to acts of theft or criminal harm by any director or employee against the company, resulting in direct or indirect loss of goods or financial value by the company, for example, misappropriation of assets, including both tangible items such as cash and goods, as well as intangible items such as time card manipulation, fraudulent accounting, forging financial documents, conflict of interest, cronyism and nepotism, etc.

5. Facilitation payment

Facilitation payments are small compensations awarded to civil servants or state officials in exchange for providing the payer with special benefits not awarded normally.

Normally, facilitation payments are made to help expedite the process, or ensure that the state official will perform for the payer or relaxing any incoming inspections. Facilitation payments are illegal in almost all countries, including Thailand.

6. Political support

Political support refers to sponsoring politicians or political parties, both monetary and non-monetary, as well as lending or donating equipment and services free of charge, or encouraging directors or employees to participate in political activities on behalf of Crop Integration Business, all in order to gain a competitive advantage.

7. Civil servant or state official

Civil servant or state official, including employees of state enterprises or government agencies, or government representative or election candidate, political party member or international public organization (i.e. United Nations, World Bank) or any person acting on behalf of the groups mentioned above. Governments include state, local, regional and national governments, both with respect to legislative power, executive power, and judicial power
